SILCHAR

Silchar, the headquarter of Cachar district is 343km from Guwahati. During the British rule, ships were docked at the bank of river Barak. The bank was covered with stones to help dock ships & vessels, and the market was developed at a place that was fully covered with stones. People started to refer to the place as Shiler Chor, meaning "a bank of stones". With the passage of time, Shiler Chor was simplified to Silchar, and ultimately the British officials started to use the name Silchar in official documents. Silchar is known for it's Rich cultural, economic and educational centres in Southern Assam. The weather in March is pleasant with an average day temperature of 25°C. It is well connected to all parts of India by Air, Rail and Road. The Organising committee of the 2nd Annual Conference of ASA welcomes you to Silchar.
